Review Problems for Introductory Physics 1 May 20,2019 Robert G.Brown,Instructor Duke University PhysicsDepartment errors of other sorts, bad ?gures, and one or two of them are really too di?cult for this course but haven't been sorted out or altered to make them doable. Leaving these in just adds to the fun. $A/2 = Ae-t t =$ (for put too much distance between the world kids see before them and the material they are asked to master . Challenge-based learning puts that world in center focus, and surfaces the essential relevance of their core subjects at the same time, as the six remarkable case studies we present make powerfully clear .

The critical care unit is unusually busy and short-staffed due to sick calls. A Code Blue is called at 3 a.m. on a medical-surgical unit. The critical care nurse assigned to the emergency response team asks her fellow nurses to cover her patients while she responds. The nurses reassure her they will collective-ly keep an eye on her patients.

This is true on board the such that he arrives just in time to see the °ash of blue. So without thinking too hard we can say We have found in part (i) an observer who can travel from one event to the other at $v < c$, and since the spacecraft is as good a signal as any, from what we learned in class the order

2.1 Reflection Figure 2-1. Spheres reflected in the floor and in each other. Reflection occurs when a wave hits the interface between two dissimilar media, so that all of or at least part of the wave front returns into the medium from which it originated. Common examples are reflection of light, as shown in figure 2-1, as well as reflection of
